

Open-Mindedness

You

1. Increasing your potential in doing different things without having fixed opinions that I can do only this or only this much
2. Maintaining clarity about your strengths and weaknesses
3. Being open to feedback
4. Exposing yourself to new things and new ideas

Your Personal Relationships

1. Understanding the strengths, weaknesses, interests, and needs of people
2. Not concluding about the nature of a person too fast
3. Listening to the opinions of others on different things with an intention to understand and consider them
4. Giving a benefit of doubt and trying to understand the situations of others

Your Career

1. Exploring different career options
2. Being open to new ways of executing a task
3. Exploring different ways of learning
4. Learning from others' successes
5. Encouraging new thoughts during meetings

Instruction

You could start with one small area to open up to new ideas, and then gradually include more areas of your life. Starting small can help you ease into having an open mind, instead of making a sudden, drastic change in your life.

Examples of Action Items that we can take up to build Open-Mindedness

- ✓ Think of a topic that you do not agree about with your friend/family member/anyone. Now, take their position and think of 3 substantial reasons why their point of view is valid.
- ✓ If you find that you're eating the same things all the time or cooking in the same way, try some variation in your menu.
- ✓ Observe your emotion while you are listening to opposing views on a topic - are you feeling anger immediately. See what you can do alternatively.
- ✓ Think -
 - a) When was the last time you changed your mind?
 - b) When was the last time you told someone, "You were right. I was wrong"?
- ✓ Before accepting or rejecting an idea/opinion/suggestion, ask a lot of questions to get a better understanding.

- ✓ Try new things
 - a) Go to new places
 - b) Take on a new hobby.
 - c) Do things differently. Put your socks on before your pants
 - d) Take a different route to work/home.

- ✓ When you understand that you made a mistake, admit it immediately.
Admit mistakes early and often.

- ✓ Seek feedback for the actions that you do, like dancing, playing, learning, working, etc.

- ✓ Identify qualities/knowledge/skills that are in people you know. See if you can learn anything from them, particularly the ones which help you.

- ✓ Observe your language:
 - a) Using more 'buts' is an indication of closed-mindedness. Saying "but" means you are saying that the opposite person's opinion is not as valid as your opinion

 - b) Are we speaking in a generalised way or speaking specifically?

Ex.

 1. He is a rude person - Generalised statement
 2. Once or twice, I saw him shouting at people. I am not sure about the reasons for him to do that - Specific statement
